Jill Coleman is a native of Cooperstown, NY. A graduate from Cooperstown High School and Burlington College, in Vermont, she has traveled much of the country. Jill currently resides with her three children and their dog, in the Great Smokey Mountains of Western North Carolina. Born an artist, and through great support of her family and friends, Jill remains an artist, of many mediums. She is inspired and moved by human connection as well as spiritual connection. She incorporates a full spectrum of life, death and ceremony, with simplistic detail, in much of her work. Her passions range from stippling portraiture, to large scale, colorful paintings with strong black outlines, to creating intentional/ceremonial tattoos on skin. She loves creating with textiles, as well as with clay. All of Jill's artwork is created with thoughtful intention. While allowing space for her audience to explore and create their own perception and experience, there is a great amount of symbolism within, and at the core, of each piece. Jill is a level one reiki practitioner, ordained minister, and medium. She feels her roots extend through hundreds of lifetimes and uses this understanding to guide her artistic endeavors.
