Art teacher at Queensbury Union Free School (Queensbury New York)

After retiring, I used my new free time to catch up on some things that I let slide over the years. After a fashion, however, I got reacquainted with the production of art and started painting again. It feels good. I have found my voice. This is how I will end my days.

This painting is about capturing the quality of a fresh pizza, still in the box. I was trying to get the feel of what the the surface is like - gooey, greasy, stringy, cheesy with sweet tart tomato sauce and crusty edges. But, capturing it only with your eyes - untouchable.
